If your medical needs are low, a less comprehensive option might leave you with left-over flex dollars that you can direct to your RRSP.</li> <li>• If you or anyone else in your family, has been diagnosed with a chronic illness requiring ongoing medication - make sure you're thinking about this as you choose your medical option.</li> <li>• When you choose an option, you are selecting all the features and levels of coverage within that option.</li> </ul> Think about what you have. Consider last year's selection and what your out-of-pocket expenses were. Do you need to increase or decrease your coverage? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• If your spouse has medical coverage, you may want to consider option 1 and then direct your extra flex dollars to your HCSA.</li> <li>• If your spouse has coverage, and you want to coordinate your benefits, you can save money with option 2 and have more dollars going to your HCSA to help cover any out-of-pocket expenses.</li> <li>• If you or a family member has significant medical needs, option 4 offers comprehensive coverage with 90% reimbursement for a broad range of medical expenses. You pay a little each month, but will also have peace of mind knowing that you're covered.</li> </ul>

Just ask your dentist.</li> </ul> Consider: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• If your spouse has dental benefits, or your dental-care needs are low, option 1 might be right for you. Any dental expenses may be reimbursed from your Health Care Spending Account (HCSA).</li> <li>• If you're looking for 100% reimbursement, and your spouse has coverage, option 2 might be the best option for you, and you may still have money left over for your HCSA.</li> <li>• If you anticipate the need for major care in the next 12 months, you may want to consider either option 3 or option 4.</li> </ul>

You may also need training or special equipment. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>While AD&amp;D coverage provides a benefit only if your loss is the result of an accident, it is a low-cost way to provide additional life insurance coverage - but it doesn't replace it.</li> <li>You may want to consider coverage for your child too, as a catastrophic injury that results in a disability could mean a lifetime of related expenses.</li> </ul>

LTD Benefit Insured by Manulife	If you are unable to return to work after 26 weeks of short-term disability leave, and you qualify for Long-Term Disability (LTD) coverage, the LTD plan will continue to provide you with a portion of your monthly pay, based on the long-term disability coverage option that you choose. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The maximum monthly benefit that anyone can receive is the lesser of $15,000 per month or 85% of net pre-disability income.</li> </ul>	Think about your expenses. How much income would you need if you became disabled and unable to work? Rent, food, car and mortgage payments don't go away just because you can't go to work. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>If you are the sole family provider, you may need a richer long-term disability coverage option. Options 3 or 4 offer a larger benefit, but it's more expensive.</li> <li>If yours is a second income, the lower-cost option may be just fine for your needs.</li> <li>Younger employees may want to consider the options that provide cost-of-living increases.
